Adoptions FAQ

Everything you need to know about adopting with BCCC.

How do I start the adoption process?

Start by completing BCCC's online adoption application. Once your application is received, we'll review it and contact your veterinarian for a reference, if applicable.

Do I need a veterinary reference?

If you have a veterinarian, you'll need to give them permission to provide BCCC with a reference. If you're a first-time pet owner and don't have a veterinary history, that's okay.

We'll review your application and contact you to discuss potential adoption if your application looks like a good fit.

What happens after my application is approved?

We'll contact you to discuss the adoption and arrange a meet-and-greet with the cat or cats at their foster home. The meet-and-greet helps determine whether the adoption is a good fit.

Can I take my new cat home after the meet-and-greet?

If the meet-and-greet goes well, you can take your new cat home. Please bring a cat carrier and the adoption fee.

Can I adopt a single kitten?

Single kittens are adopted only to approved households that already have a fully vetted kitten or a cat under two years old. Cats or kittens listed as pairs will not be separated.

How much are the adoption fees?

- Kittens younger than 1 year: $350 or $650 for a pair
- Adults 1–3 years: $225
- Adults 4–6 years: $200
- Adults 7–10 years: $175
- Seniors: Fee varies by age

What veterinary care do BCCC cats receive?

All BCCC cats are spayed or neutered and combination tested for FIV, FeLV, and heartworm. Kittens also receive their vaccinations.

What happens to my cat's medical records?

After adoption, your new cat's medical records will be transferred electronically to your veterinarian.

What does BCCC expect after adoption?

BCCC expects adopted cats and kittens to receive regular annual wellness check-ups, along with veterinary care if an unexpected health issue comes up. Addressing medical concerns early can help prevent small issues from becoming more serious.
